What Does This Mean?

Mineral Wealth in Quebec.
The new territory, Ungava, recently added to the Province of Quebec, is believed to contain rich mineral deposits. Only a few trails have yet been made through this enormous territory—an empire in itself, containing a superficies of no less than 351,780 square miles, or 225,139,200 acres. Yet upon its very outskirts, there are a number of most promising indications. An iron deposit has actually been worked, gold, mica, antimony, and copper have been found, and some of the leading authorities of the Geological survey have declared that diamonds may yet be discovered in the northern region, those found in the glacial drift of Wisconsin having apparently been transported by ice during the glacial period from some point in the Laurentian region in the neighborhood of Hudson bay. In fact, a couple of years ago a Montreal jeweler bought a large diamond said to have been discovered in Ungava.

London's Government.
Greater London, with a population of 7,000,000 and an area of 700 square miles, is a composite district made up of 38 city boroughs and 29 suburban towns, governed by various city and town councils, but in certain matters subordinate to the London county council.

BREAK TRACK RECORD AT RACES YESTERDAY

DON DENSMORE GOES FIRST HEAT OF FREE-FOR-ALL RACE IN 2:05 1/4

FAST FIELDS ENTERED

Alice McGregor Trote Mile in 2:14 1/4 and Cecil Woodland Wins 2:18 Pace With Best Time 2:14 1/4

Track records were broken and sensational races were pulled off at the fair grounds yesterday afternoon. The fastest fields ever entered on the Janesville tracks participated in yesterday's events and the fields were large in the 2:18 pace and the 2:16 trot that it was necessary to run the races in two divisions.

The sensational time of the day, breaking the track record for competitive racing, was made in the heat of the free-for-all pace by Don Densmore at 2:05 1/4. He went the second heat nearly as well at 2:05 1/4, and had been pushed a little harder yesterday than he would have made the circuit in 2:05 or less as the track was in perfect condition.

One of DuBrock's jockeys, in the other big speed record of the day, made sensational and almost unheard of time for this part of the country, making five-eighths of a mile in 1:01 1/4 in a running race.

In the first division of the 2:18 pace Cecil Woodland made the second heat in 2:12 1/4. This horse also took the race in three straight heats in a field of seven starters. In the second division of the same class honors went to Helen Mott of the Fenelon stables, whose best heat was made in 2:12 1/4. In the race of C. N. the only Janesville horse entered yesterday, secured fourth money.

Alice McGregor did some wonderful work in the first division of the 2:16 trot, on the half mile course, her best time being 2:14 1/4. She was pushed by Red Band, but several times after a poor start, she came up past three or four leaders winning every heat in great style.

The following is the summary:
2:18 Pace, First Division.
Cecil Woodland 1 1 1
J. O. 2 2 2
Artoletta 3 3 3
Little Rapid 4 4 4
Hal S. Manilla Birchwood and Power Patch also started.
Time—2:12 1/4, 2:11 1/4, 2:18 1/4.

2:18 Pace, Second Division.
Helen Mott 1 1 1
Birdie B. 2 2 2
E. F. B. 3 3 3
J. C. N. 4 4 4

FAIR CROWDS ENJOY FINE MUSIC TODAY

Bower City Band Plays Stirring Tunes for Janesville Day—Given Much Praise.
Janesville day at the fair was marked by the appearance of the Bower City band of twenty-six pieces, under the direction of Prof. W. T. Thiele. Praise for the excellence of their music and their liberality in dispensing it was heard on all sides. In the morning at ten o'clock the band gave a down town concert and serenaded the Gazette office, playing two selections, "This is the Life" and "Some Baby."

The Monroe band, which furnished music on Wednesday, was also a fine aggregation of musicians and the Edgerton band, which plays tomorrow, will not disappoint the lovers of band music; nor did the Moose band on Tuesday last.

RINGLING BROTHERS' CIRCUS WILL BE HERE SEPT. 3

Of joy to young and old alike is the announcement that on Sept. 3 Ringling Brothers' circus, the big canvas city, will give two exhibitions in Janesville. This notice is awaited with intense interest every year by the thousands who never miss attending the "world's greatest show," treat to look forward to.

The most staid and conservative citizen finds something here to make him unbend, but to the children is the Ringling Brothers' circus most ardent of circus with some real big holiday treat to look forward to.

This year the performance opens with a new, gorgeous and brilliant spectacle, "Solomon and the Queen of Sheba." More than 1,250 people appear in it, together with 735 horses and 300 dancing girls. This production is said to have cost $1,000,000 to build and requires an entire train to transport its scenery, costume and tons of stage properties.

The new circus features include the Lloyds in sensational riding exhibitions; the Balkanis, equestrians from the Balkan Mountains; the Borsinis, who accomplish marvelous feats of moving globes; the Mijares, wizards of the swinging wire; boxing and wrestling kangaroos direct from Australia; five great perch acts that make the heart go pty-pat; three troupes of hot white horses and dogs that move like marble statues; a menagerie consisting of 108 cages containing 1,003 wild animals; fifty clowns, and 375 novelty circus acts.

SOCIETY TO FURNISH MOVIES TO CHURCHES

New York, Aug. 13.—One of the biggest religious and educational movements in the history of this country is now comfortably housed at No. 15 East First street in one of New York's newest office buildings. At its head is the Duke of Manchester, and seconding him is Dr. William Carter, former pastor of the Madison Avenue Reformed church and a lecturer of note.

The organization, of which the duke is the head, is known as the International Educational League, and its international vice president is the Inter-Church Social Service Bureau, of which Dr. Carter is president. The two organizations have become allied through a common purpose which is to put motion pictures in the schools, churches and other religious and educational institutions throughout the United States.

The service which these two organizations will give will have been started by the first of October and will cover as wide a field as possible from the first. Later, as the work is enlarged there will be additions to the service and policy and the serving of 10,000 churches and schools is anticipated as one of the possibilities of the next five years.

JANESVILLE PEOPLE ON THEIR WAY HOME

Many of Those Marooned in Europe Have Started for Home or Will Shortly.

Janesville tourists who were marooned in Europe when the great strife broke out, are for the most part, on their return home, or have made arrangements for sailing. Some, however, will have to remain where they are for the present and from some no word has been received.

Dr. E. F. Woods and Dr. T. W. Nuzum, who have been in London attending the medical meeting, sailed on Saturday last on the Teutonic and will be in Montreal this coming Saturday night or Sunday morning. Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Howe, Miss Howe and Miss Joan Muggleton sailed on the Baltic from Liverpool on Wednesday, and Mrs. David Holmes, Miss Elizabeth Holmes and Master David Holmes are still in London, but will sail for this side on the Royal George of the Canadian Line.

A cable from Mrs. A. P. Lovejoy, who with her daughter, are staying at Grundenwald, Switzerland, written in French, the only language the cable company will receive messages in, says that all was well. Nothing has been heard from Francis Connors, who is in Berlin, and his father can get no cables to him. It is thought he is all right, however. The whereabouts of Mr. Charles Wild and daughter is unknown and nothing definite is known of the W. S. Jeffris party, supposed to be in Athens. Constantinople was started. Mrs. M. G. Jeffris and Miss Helen Jeffris are in the north of England and other Janesville visitors are thought to be in Paris or London. At the present time the street has been drawn by Germany, hence unable to communicate with their friends. Kenneth Parker is still in London but will take an early steamer for home.

BREAKS HIS PAROLE; MUST GO TO PRISON

John Conroy Sentenced to Year at Waupun Prison for Violation of Commitment Law.

The minimum sentence, one year in the state's prison at Waupun, was imposed on John Conroy by Municipal Judge H. L. Maxfield this morning when Conroy pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking jail. Had a lighter sentence been possible it is probable that the court would have imposed a jail term since Conroy has a wife and small daughter who were present in court and since liquor was blamed for the offense.

In Conroy's case, he was never placed behind the bars and yet the charge of breaking jail was pressed against him. The commitment law provides that any person who shall violate the terms of his parole and leave the place where he was committed to work shall be sentenced from one to three years in the state's prison. Conroy only served a few months on his year's jail sentence when he left the farm at which he had been working and he was arrested at Orlorville Tuesday for intoxication when it was learned he had not completed serving his sentence.

James Roach, an ex-convict and "soul-winner" who is now nearly seventy years of age, was given twenty days in jail in default of a fine of $15 and costs. Roach, too old to play his nefarious trade, has become a vagrant and yesterday was arrested by Chief Champion for being drunk and disorderly on the streets. At one time Roach was a feared criminal.

Mike Dwyer, drew fifty days in jail for a fine of $25 and costs for intoxication. Dwyer recently was before the court but the second offense charge was not pressed against him. Both Roach and Dwyer took the jail sentences.

FORGETS HIS WIFE; GETS YEAR IN JAIL

Richard Sandaway Who Planned to Wed Beloit Girl While Wife Lived in Chicago, Draws Sentence.

Richard Sandaway, a stone cutter who formerly lived in this city, was sentenced by Municipal Judge Fry in Chicago yesterday to serve a year in the house of correction to recall to him that he is possessed of a wife and four children.

Sandaway left his home in Chicago on June 1 with the statement that he was going to Hot Springs, Ark., for health. His wife, however, instead of there he wooed and won a girl by the name of Elsie Gellishohn. They secured a license in Chicago and were to have been married some ten days ago but Chicago police sent word to arrest Sandaway as he had a wife and children in Chicago who were in destitute circumstances.

Mrs. Sandaway although she had heard from her husband every few days with assurance that he was getting better, never noticed that the letters were postmarked Beloit, Wis., and bore the date of Hot Springs. A clipping from a Beloit newspaper which was sent to her told the story of her husband's faithlessness and she secured his arrest.

The warrant brought her husband before Judge Fry, where his defense was that he forgot for the time being that he was married.

Miss Gellishohn was a witness against the man in the Chicago court according to the Tribune. Her sympathy, she said, went out to the wife and children, and she was not averse to seeing him "sent up for life."

"I had no idea this man was married," she said. "I met him at a picnic in Harlem park, Rockford, Ill., and there we became engaged. I got married again, but F. A. Sandaway, the stonecutter could not be trusted."

TO DECIDE QUESTION OF STREET'S WIDTH

City Council Will Adjust Controversy of Property Owners on Monroe Street.

On Friday afternoon the council will hold a public hearing to hear arguments on the controversy raised over the width of Monroe street. The council will take steps to settle the question.

People interested in the change of width from thirty to thirty-four feet will attend the meeting and a statement will be made. The question has been raised over the private building of curb and gutter work at the intersection of Glenn and Monroe streets which will effect the width of the highway in case the council orders improvements made in future years. The property owners have expressed the attitude that as long as it is their wish to have a wider street the city should allow for it. Other property owners say that as long as the street is not used heavily by traffic a thirty foot street will meet the demand, reduce the maintenance cost and allow for more parking on the curb line.

ARRANGING PLANS FOR CUTTING DOWN NUMBER OF TELEPHONE POLES.

No definite action was taken by the council at the hearing for the purpose of arriving at means to cut down the number of poles by consolidating the various companies' lines on mutual poles and establishing a professional zone on Main and Milwaukee street. After the entire party of representatives from the city, the Wisconsin Telephone company and the Janesville Electric company had made a trip through the city, the telephone men asked for time to formulate plans to meet the city's petition.

GARBAGE DISPENSED WITH

Kept Underground Until Drained and Disposed of by Burning.

The newest garbage can dispenses entirely with the daily visits of the garbage collector. He has been selected to by really tidy housekeepers mainly because of the mess that he leaves behind him making it necessary for some one to clean up immediately following his call. The new system contemplates that the householder should dispose of the garbage by burning at such times as may be convenient. Provision for the accumulation and draining of the kitchen refuse is made in a new apparatus which is buried in a hole at some convenient place in the yard. Here the water falls away from the solid matter until the latter is dry enough to burn when it is lifted out in a basket-like receptacle and subjected to the action of flame. This may be done without any effort and without soiling the hands or clothing. When the receptacle is in its place in the ground only the top is visible above the surface and by an automatic device the opening is always closed so that there is no occasion for it to attract the flies nor for the escape of odors. It is opened when desired by merely touching an exposed knob with the foot.

GERMAN CRUISER ON THE PACIFIC COAST

The German cruiser Nurnberg is in Pacific coast waters, not far from California. She is modern in every respect, was built in 1907 and is equipped with ten four-inch 40-caliber guns, eight five-pounders, four rapid-fire machine guns and two submerged torpedo tubes.

STRAIGHT EDGE FOR SKIRT

System of Four Tape Lines to Secure the Correct Length.

The matter of securing the proper length and even out of the lower edge of the skirt is a very important detail of the feminine toilette. The success of a gown often depends entirely on this seemingly trifling matter. It often betrays the difference between a made-over and a new dress for a ragged and uneven edge at the bottom of the skirt will condemn what would be otherwise a good piece of home dressmaking. Various devices have been made to accomplish this, but they are generally

TAPE LINE FOR SKIRT MEASUREMENT.

erally so elaborate that the services of a second person are required to make the measurements and marks by which the hem is located. The tape-line arrangement is designed to be a great assistance to the home dressmaker or the professional for that matter. In the operation of securing the proper swing to the skirt it will prove an infallible guide. While two persons can make use of it effectively, it is possible for a woman unassisted to measure and mark the hem of the skirt in a manner which will do her proud.

FEDERALS HARD HIT IN SEVERAL CITIES BY LEAN RECEIPTS

Outlaw League Will Have To Change Map To Stand the Tide Declares Hal Sheridan.
(By Hal Sheridan.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Aug. 13.—If the young and ambitious Federal baseball league is to stand the test of time, it will have to change its map to stand the tide of lean receipts. Hal Sheridan, president of the league, declared today that the league is in a "tight place" and that it will have to change its map to stand the tide of lean receipts.

In some cities the new circuit has gone over with a bang and a hurrah. In Baltimore it went over with such a splash that it put the International club in that city on the blink for fair. In practically all cities the Orioles have been out of commission. Against the Federal league's plan to get enough to pay the gatekeepers. Conditions around the circuit, however, were not so rosy.

In St. Louis the Federal started off with a big rush, slowed down quickly and in a month or two the scries were counting the attendance along the river every day and they didn't tote adding machines along with them either.

Psychological conditions—whatever they are—figured importantly in the case of the St. Louis club. It just "disappeared" this year. The Browns and Cardinals are going wild, playing tag-up ball and keeping within shouting distance of the leaders in their respective leagues. It was the first time in many moons that St. Louis fans had been in the lead.

Kansas City is not particularly a Federal stronghold. The Federal there have never done any better than break even with the American Association. And when the Kansas City attendance is split, neither club is going to get rich. Judging from talk the Federal magnates have been saying, Kansas City is to be dropped some time during the next week. It's a far cry from Baltimore to Kansas City and the magnates realize they will have to have a more compact organization to succeed.

Consistent rumors are heard that Cincinnati will have a berth in 1915 "outlaw" circuit. The Federal were reported there when they first sprang up last year. The club was in Covington, across the river, however, and it wouldn't journey that far to the next year. It's a far cry from Baltimore to Kansas City and the magnates realize they will have to have a more compact organization to succeed.

Chicago, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh while they haven't made oceans of coin, are pretty sure to stick. Buffalo is a dubious location. The Federal have done little better than break even there. They had expected to coin a lot of money. Summing it up, Kansas City is almost certain to lose its berth and Buffalo and St. Louis are very dubious points. Indianapolis has been sure of a berth as the Federal club has done better than most of the season.

St. Paul, St. Louis and Pittsburgh must be given credit for being a real leader. His week at Boston this year stamps him as one of the real managers of the Federal league circuit. He classes his club as a "big league" club. His judgment of players is his strength point and second to that is his ability to get most out of them. He has repeatedly switched his team around, striving to get them in the best proper shape. He has swapped and sold and bought until a very changed lineup from the one of a year ago is seen on the Boston club. But he is getting the results at present and that is something no one else is able to do at Boston for a year.

Birmingham evidently has set out to build up a team of youngsters. Except Joe has been away for a long time. The Nap leader is making efforts to trade off some of his "big league" stars. He declares that some of the best men on his club are not going to win as they should and for that reason he is out to fill their places with youngsters who will give the club all they have. Once before Birmingham announced he was going to get rid of Napoleon Lajoie. Such a deal of protest went up from Cleveland and Cincinnati. President Sommers stepped in and forced Birmingham to change his plans. Whether or not he will do it again if Birmingham announces that Lajoie is due for the time is causing much conjecture.

AT THE APOLLO.

An act comes to the Apollo for the first time of the week that is heralded as extra good. It is the Lyric Quartet, composed of four young men who are reputed to have voices of unusual excellence. Sauls and Rockwood will present transparent paintings and singing. Bonnie Cruz as a prima donna will render vocal selections.

Sport Snap Shots

It's funny, but the Cincinnati Reds are a better team on the road than they are at home. Why this should be it is hard to tell, because the popular notion is that most teams win most of their games on the home lot. Not so with the Reds it seems. Not so long ago in Cincy, after finishing a long season at home wherein the team had lost most of the games, they were found to be oddly enough in a cheery and happy mood. It would have been thought that they would weep and wail a bit after such a performance. Well, we're off for a trip on the road now," he said, "and now watch us get a little glinger. We always win away from home. And they did. Among other things, they walked away with a series from the Giants.

The idea that Walter Johnson may join the Federal at the close of the present season is loudly and raucously hooted in Washington. They are willing to bet in the capital city that Walter will be with the Senators next season and for many a season thereafter. Clark Griffith, it is bruited about, will offer Johnson when the present season's close draws night, a contract for five years with a salary whose sum for the period will amount to something like $100,000. This makes it seem reasonable that Walter will be with the Senators next year.

There are those who wonder that Connie Mack continues at the top of the American league heap with only one or two presentable pitchers. All such might be recommended to the study of the Athletic line-up.

MAKES GREAT SHOWING

Six Round Bout Between Klein and Klotka, One of Slugging Milling to Draw—Crammer and Griffen Faked Clover Farc.

Kid Mahoney, of Racine got the surprise of his life in his ten round bout against Young Scotty, of Milwaukee, before the Bower City Athletic club last night for Scotty gave and took all Mahoney was able to command and earned a good draw against the notable Racine featherweight. With the exception of the Crammer-Griffen go which was evidently faked, the bouts on the program were championship in form—equally matched men performing in a whirlwind fashion that left the audience well repaid. The crowd was a disappointment for the quality of the fights warranted a crowd three times as large.

In the main ten round bout Young Scotty went on the state of fame for his work against Kid Mahoney, for the Milwaukee feather "ate-up" all the punishment Mahoney could give him and played heavily for Mahoney's body with wicked jolts with a ferocity that baffled his opponent. Not once did Scotty retreat from his opponent's attack but he ripped into Mahoney's well guarded body, wrestled, clawed, hammered and punished the Racine boy in his uppercuts. The climax of the bout came in the fifth round when Young Scotty dropped Mahoney to the canvass for an instant with a hard jolt that clipped the Racine kid over the eye. Mahoney dropped but started to rise before the count of ten. Once in the bout did the straight hard punches of Mahoney seem to phase Scotty and the seconds in Mahoney's corner began wondering if the Milwaukee fighter had gone for law.

Throughout the bout Scotty was the aggressor but Mahoney got the draw on his cleaner hitting, cleverer defense work and general all around that caught Scotty on the face when the latter was rushing him and Mahoney's left often caught Scotty on the jaw after Scotty had missed a lead. Ring generalship saved Mahoney several times from a trouncing for when Scotty had him in a bad way particularly in the fifth and ninth rounds, Mahoney was able to smother Scotty's vicious attack until little head work in planning his fight for several times. Putting Mahoney out had been able to land on the Racine boy's jaw but instead Scotty would rush Mahoney and attempt to smash his stomach with uppercuts and jolts.

Scotty after receiving a good stiff right on the jaw rushed Mahoney to the ropes on the opening of the first round and got home winning smashes evening the round up. The second was even and Mahoney earned a shade in the third when he beat Scotty "to it" in the leads with left jabs and then uppercutted Scotty in the fourth. Mahoney showed good blocking this round for Scotty was unable to find a hole in his defense. The fourth was an even break as Mahoney's swings were now going over Scotty's shoulder or hitting him on the back of the neck.

The fifth was Scotty's by a wide margin and his showing in this round, many fans believed, entitled him to a shade in the fight. Mahoney bobbed his head with his left but Scotty never faltered and backed the Racine boy to the ropes. After a painting Scotty whipped over a left hook which caught Mahoney over the eye and dropped him flat on the canvass. Mahoney was up in a flash and clinched as Scotty rushed him to the ropes and corner. Mahoney edged out of the corner and was glad to be able to hang on. Mahoney retaliated and the sixth was even with a slight shade in Mahoney's favor for he whipped across rights several times when Scotty rushed repeating right into the well timed wallop.

The eighth was even Scotty getting an even break on the exchanges countering with a stiff left when Mahoney struck with his right. This round Scotty was aggressive and tore after Mahoney but was unable to get to him. Scotty had Mahoney guessing in the ninth for he ducked the force of Mahoney's punches and closed the round by connecting body punches that had Mahoney's heels touching the floor. The closing round was full of attempts of both to earn the decision and the Cream City boxer went after his man and pushed him all over the arena but Mahoney cracked him often with jolts and uppercuts. Scotty in the fighting was attempting back hand punches and worked Mahoney by pounding him on the neck and was warned for using his elbows.

The bout could be called nothing but a cracking good draw but the showing of Scotty in a victory for the Jones Islander in that he was supposed to meet a fighter away out of his class.

Scientific boxing with open gloves and light slaps that gave the audience an impression of a whirlwind bout was exhibited by Billy Crammer and Barney Griffin, both of Milwaukee. Although Promoter George Ihig ordered the fight stopped in the fifth round for "roomate" boxing, but after warning by Referee Hyde, the bout was allowed to continue to the limit, eight rounds. On the advice of Commissioner Leininger the two boxers were not paid and the matter will be taken up before the boxing commission on the charge that both men were stalling and a carefully rehearsed fight was put up.

Crammer had a marvelous defense for he could apparently cover all that Griffin laid to offer and Griffin did not have eight rounds for an effective count. Short straight jobs were all Crammer landed and he shot them across with light force when Griffin lead. Griffin lead the fight but invariably got a jolt on the chin for his boldness.

The second fight, six rounds, between Billy Klein of Freeport and Klotka, Milwaukee, was the best match of the evening for whom the opening of the four the two boys stood toe to toe and slugged wildly and effectively. Such milling as these boys put up is seldom seen, for they made no pretense of covering but slashed home wallops and came back for more. The bout was a draw for Klein's showing in the last half of the battle balanced Klotka's early lead. The fighting of both boxers was savage and the grueling pace never slackened their pace in the slam-bang quarrel. Klotka was the cleverest of the pair and had Klein "going" in the first two rounds, but in the third Klein shot home body wallops that brought a look of chagrin on Klotka's map. In the third, Klotka opened up a cut over Klein's eye that was well warranted. Klein round and the blood drenched Klein greatly. Punishment had no effect on these boys who seemed to thrive on hard wallops.

Charlie Lyden, the fighting farmer of Janesville, in his debut in the ring earned a shade over Burns of Milwaukee, for the local boxer floored Burns in the second round with a clip on the jaw. The bout went for four rounds.

Dan Hyde of Milwaukee refereed the entire card and proved satisfactory to the crowd for he let the boxers alone until they started holding. Mahoney protested against Scotty's rough work in the main fight and Scotty was warned by Hyde in his corner, and thereafter there was no cause for complaint.

Two ladies attended the boxing show and appeared to enjoy the exhibition. H. L. Legner, chairman of the state boxing commission, and his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Deans occupied an upper box during the program.

Promoter George Ihig ordered the semi wind-up bout stopped in the fifth round, declaring the boxers were stalling. Referee Hyde told Griffin and Crammer to get busy and the bout was allowed to finish. The matter may be taken before the commission for action.

Griffin had a rib on his left side cracked in this bout and it was at first thought that two bones were broken. A physician examined Griffin after his fight and found a slight split in an upper rib.

Scotty's knockdown in the fifth round by a left hook that did not travel over a foot, but Mahoney said when he got to the corner that he felt it all over. Fans predicted that Scotty would be helpless before the clever Mahoney, but the further the bout went the more class Scotty showed.

This may be the last bout that will be attempted by the Bower City club, for the club directors lost heavily on the exhibition last night. No better matches could be seen anywhere and fans had every variety of boxing—slugging match, clever speed and scientific match, and a gilt edge main bout.

EXPORT FACTS.

An exchange in commenting upon the proposed rehabilitation of the merchant marine of this country, says:

"An immediate consideration is the distribution of our surplus wheat to foreign customers. Only fourteen per cent of neutral shipping is available,
including our own, and this is liable
to capture and possible confiscation
after long delay. If Great Britain becomes effective as the real mistress
of the sea, a large part of the problem is solved. She is our largest consumer, and can supply the continent,
exclusive of Germany and Austria.

"Failing such a condition, there are many serious objections to the registration of the vessels of belligerents
under the American flag in time of actual war, even if congress is willing to repeal our navigation laws and allow a mercantile marine possible. All such vessels are peculiarly liable to capture, and the American flag would not protect them. They would have to prove, before the prize court of the captor, that there had been a bona fide transfer, and if this were true
they would still be out of the transportation business for an indefinite
time.

"It is entirely true that such prize
courts have the past decade
against their own country, and Great Britain holds incomparably the best record in this respect. Nothing reounds more, in fact, to the fairness
of the properly trained judicial mind
than the decisions of the prize courts,
although in some cases, and particularly by Russia during the war with Japan, there were grossly unfair decisions.

"It must be remembered that the capture and detention of an American vessel, flying the flag of the United States, is not an act of war, and that this country would put itself in the wrong, to say nothing of violating its own precedents, if it resented such capture. But even with that would amount, in practice, to a British guarantee of the safety of the seas, there are still other serious objections to this rough and ready method of creating an American merchant marine.

"Unless the laws relating to employment on American vessels are repealed, as well as those affecting registration, it would be impracticable
for such ships to keep the seas except where a highly remunerative cargo
and revenue could be guaranteed.
This is impossible in the development
of trade with South America for years
to come, and even in such a crisis as this, the repugnance to ship subsidizing throws the American shipper back up on the economical tramp ship, flying
what the English sailorman affectionately calls the old red duster.

"These plans for an improved mercantile marine are like those of congressmen from the middle states, who think that an army or navy can be improved in like manner. The problem is by no means so simple."

FICTION AND FACT.

In connection with war news published throughout the country these stirring days, the Wall Street Journal
says:

"Two thoughts will occur to the intelligent student of that part of the newspapers which has the impudence to call itself 'war news.' The most obvious is that only one side of the story is told. Germany and Austria are so surrounded they can with difficulty communicate with the outside world. For this reason dispatches from Brussels, Paris or London should only be accepted at a heavy discount.
But one fact not quite so obvious,
but much more important in its ultimate bearing, emerges. It is that Germany's lightning stroke upon France, which was the basis of her strategy in 1870, and must necessarily constitute at least an important part of her plans, is now an important part of her eastern frontier, has failed.

"Discarding the nonsense in the vainglorious cables from Brussels,
there still remains the fact that the rush through Belgium to the weakest part of the French frontier, has been held up at a time when every moment
is priceless. Germany did not anticipate even forty-eight hours of resistance at Liege; and if she captures that city today or tomorrow she still has to reduce the more formidable fortifications of Namur before the way to the French frontier is open.

In 1870, the fifth year of the Seven Years' war, with winter fast approaching, Frederick the Great faced the problem of a French army, greater than all his forces, on the one frontier,
and an equally large Austrian attack
on the other. In a campaign unparalleled in military history he practically destroyed the French under Marshal Soubise at Rossbach on November 5th;
and exactly thirty days afterwards, afterward, after moving his entire army
across Prussia, he utterly routed 80,000 Austrians at Leuthen. Speed was his only hope, and he had two exceptionally incompetent adversaries
to face.

"Can Germany repeat this miracle,
and will it help her if she does? Allowing that the advance through Belgium may be only a screening movement to cover her main objective, the German plans, nevertheless, have slipped a cog. Unless her strategy has changed, and the character of the German mind is not what it was supposed to be, the plan expected to work out to the minute, like the railway time-table, has manifestly suffered a vital interruption.

"As Buns says, 'the best laid schemes of mice and men gang at gley.' " Emperors are no more than men, and they are not all Fredericks."

FAKE WAR NEWS.

The war news that comes from Europe is bad enough at best but it is not necessary to fake news, to deliberately concoct stories to promote the sale of newspapers as some of the yellow sheets have been doing in Janesville since the present war began.

The Gazette receives its news from the Associated Press, the greatest of all the news-gathering organizations and the most reliable. Great care is taken to assure accuracy and the dispatches that are published in the Gazette are all carefully edited by men expert in their line of business and
are as correct as can be obtained under the existing circumstances.

If the news warrants it, the Gazette
will issue special extra editions after the regular daily edition or during the day. Persons buying the numerous extra editions that are appearing on the streets should take this fact into consideration that the papers they buy have been printed hours before the Gazette goes to press and if news of the startling nature they proclaim had been received in the news centers, it would already have appeared in the Gazette.

During the day the Gazette is in constant touch with the offices of the Associated Press, receives its news service over a special leased telephone wire and after the regular edition is printed, all news not of sufficient importance to call for an extra edition
of the paper, is printed in bulletins
and displayed in conspicuous places
throughout the city and on the bulletin board of the Gazette office.

Fake news to build up a circulation
is a poor criterion of the real value
of the newspaper publishing it. Milwaukee and Chicago papers, published hours before arriving here, can not obtain news and quicker than can the Gazette, and their dispatches are mere fakes that are published for the sake
of selling papers and are usually contradicted the following day in the earlier editions of the same papers.

THE FAIR.

Janesville Fair is now firmly established in the minds of citizens of Rock county as an annual event and next years display will be something new and different. The growing increase in the number of exhibitors and the various stables, barns, pens and the exhibit halls this year show that the fair is pleasing to the people
generally and today, Janesville day,
with the Janesville band playing, the Janesville horses racing, should mark
the high water mark of the present session. Business houses are doing all the boosting they can for the big event and the management deserve much credit for their work in creating
this opportunity for enjoyment,
education and pleasure for the people.

Well Philipp and Bancroft, conservative republicans, Esterbrook, republican with out any strings tied to him,
John Aylward Wilson democrat, Karel
and Kearney democrats, called story
and stalwart by their opponents have given their views on the political situation so we are all ready to hear Richmond and Clancy talk on home
rule and then the voters can rest until the next detachment makes their arrival.

That Mexican trouble is almost forgotten in the general European war
but it is far from settled as yet. Now Villa can not have his arms and ammunition that he ordered because Carranza thinks it might not be wise
to give him so dangerous playthings to fool with. Some day these two men will get together and then it will be a battle royal.

Americans in Europe are hastening to leave as quickly as possible and those who are not fortunate enough to secure passage home will have to remain until the relief ships arrive to bring them back to their homes.

Janesville has a band it can be proud of in the Bower City aggregation. They are finished musicians and capable of giving delightful concerts.

On The Spur of The Moment

Some Hero, This.

We have been devouring one of the summer novels in which the hero
pulled off the following stunts:
He threw himself at her feet.
He cursed himself for his folly.
He drew himself up proudly.
He cast himself loose from his moorings.

He denied himself to everybody.
He whipped himself down in a corner.
He despised himself for his weakness.

He permitted himself to go to pieces.
But the hero of the story book may be depended upon to come out all right in the end. Hence it is not surprising to read that "With a mighty effort he pulled himself together."

Uncle Abner.
Hank Tumms says he can't see
that there is anything the matter with prosperity. He never finds any difficulty in getting along. His wife is taking summer boarders again this year.

It takes a durn good man to live up to his ordinary goodby.

John W. T. Snerer.

Some women may not know as much as the men, but they have generally got a lot more sense.

Between the fresh air fends and
the fellers who are afraid of catching cold, the same people in the country
have been hard time keeping comfortable.

If there's any kid in this country
who doesn't long to become a baseball hero, there is something the matter with him and his parents
ought to have his head examined.

The Under Dog.
I am a poor pedestrian,
I'm lame and I shakle.
When'er I have to take
A trip across the downtown street.
Confusion is complete.
I dodge, I jump,
I hurry, I hurry, and
I loop the loop to beat the band;
It takes a circus acrobat
To know exactly where he's at.
I dodge a street car but to find
A motorcycle right behind.

It sports and pops,
My heart most stops,
It scares me out of five years'
growth.
(Excuse a short spasmodic oath).
Somehow the cussed thing gets by
And doesn't break my neck or thigh,
Although it tried.
I leap aside
And a mammoth touring car
Is waiting, my backbone to jar.
It honks and screams
At passing teams.
I leap and vault
And somersault
And out of the monster's way
And land before a two-horse day.
I skid about
And in and out,
And when at last quite safe I feel,
A messenger boy upon a wheel
Scraps my coat
And gets my goat.
Then 'tis my luck
To meet a truck
And to escape a fatal bump,
I jump.

Off in my life I have been told
There are some streets all paved
with gold;
It is a place that's passing fair,
It is a city free from care.
I often wonder, with a sigh,
If poor pedestrians such as I
In that far distant day
Will be able to jump
And have to bump
To get across the way.

The Scientist.
It's great to be a scientist
And give all old ideas a twist
He digs up things, a wondrous store.
He says: "The moon is made of cheese."
The papers publish wide his name
And one more man is known to fame.

Together in some college town
These scientists of great renown
Pursue investigations that
Surprise the proletariat
They always try to throw a scare
Into the public everywhere,
And every week or so they send
Us notice when the world will end.
They've found the microbes in the air,
And in the pump and everywhere.
They pass out something new each day—
They earn their salaries that way.
If they didn't these nabobs
Would soon be looking up new jobs.

PANAMA CANAL READY FOR SHIPS OF COMMERCE OF ALL NATIONS SATURDAY.

STRATEGIC WAR POINT

Canal a Ten-Year's Job and Cost the United States Four Hundred Million Dollars.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, August 13.—More than four years after the date set
when the Board of Consulting Engineers in 1906 estimated that it would take until January 1915 to complete the Panama Canal along the line then chosen by the United States government, finds itself ready to begin business next Saturday in selling tickets of passage to ships of all nations through the new gateway.

It is just ten years since the government entered the Panama canal
question, and it is nearly 400
years since the Spanish engineer first suggested such a project.

For a time the epoch which this triumph of engineering
commenced, and up to 10,000 tons
go, for it is not until next spring that
the great demonstration will be made,
but from next Saturday on, the Panama canal will be an accomplished
fact, and the commerce will gradually accustom itself to this new grove.

What it will mean to the world at large, and to particular nations, and especially the United States, is a question around which a great deal of controversy has waged, now to be answered by the Canal itself.

After the passage of a government steamer next Saturday, probably the first steamer to pass through the register applying for admission to the Pacific from the Atlantic, or vice versa, may be conducted through the 50
miles waterway upon payment of $1.25
for every ton (net) of cargo, reward given to the vessel.

At this nominal expense some two months sailing time, on a 10,000 miles
voyage around the South America continent may be saved, or the expense
of transshipment by railroad done away
with if desired.

The canal has cost the United States nearly $400,000,000. That is approximately what De Lesseps, the French engineer, figured it would cost when he undertook the job in 1878, but he spent it and more in making only a slight impression, and ended in utter failure and financial disgrace.

A year from this time it is figured
the government will have to be paying out some $15,000,000 to pay the operating cost of the canal, which will be about $4,000,000 yearly, and
the interest on its huge investment.
Whether it will be able to do so this year or for many years is a moot question.

Traffic experts have estimated that 10,000,000 tons of freight will be carried through the canal every year for the first few years, and that later it will be nearly doubled. This roughly has been the experience at the Suez canal. Last year 6,000 ships passed through the Suez, with a net tonnage of over 20,000,000. The growth in tonnage in 10 years had been more than 70 per cent.

When the Panama Canal is opened to world's commerce, it will crown a series of more than a score of interesting points in the history of the isthmus. As briefly told they are:

First Crossing of the isthmus—By Balboa who, on September 25, 1513,
much to his surprise found himself
gazing upon the Pacific Ocean after 23 days journey on foot.

First Ship to Cross the Isthmus—
In 1514 Balboa and his men carried two small ships, piecemeal, across the isthmus, intending to use them
for further exploration in the Pacific.

First Settlement of Old Panama—
In 1517, to become known later for a time as the richest city in the world.
First Regular Traffic Across Isthmus—
The spoils of conquest sent back to Spain from Peru, which became so clear that highways paved with stone
led for the pack trains.

First Thought of a Canal—Credited to Savaderra, a Spanish engineer, one of Balboa's followers, who was about to forward his plans to King Charles
V. of Spain, who died in 1550.

First Surveys for a Canal—In 1851
by Spanish engineers who deemed the project impossible of accomplishment.

First Official Decision on Canal
Project—By King Philip II, in 1620, adversely after the king's death, the project was abandoned.

First British Interest—In latter part of 17th century, when the expedition by William Paterson, founder of the Bank of England, attempted to found a colony on the isthmus
of Darien, south of the present Panama, with the ultimate intention of establishing a trans-isthmian route. The plan proved an utter failure. Many other British surveys followed in later years.

The German poet Goethe, a hundred years ago, made this remarkable prophecy: "It is absolutely indispensable that the United States effect a passage from the Atlantic Gulf to the Pacific ocean, and I am certain they will do it."

First Decision to Build—In 1814,
just 100 years ago, the Spanish government by decree entered upon the construction of an isthmian canal, but the idea was blocked by the French Central American colonies, succeeded in throwing off the Spanish yoke.

First French interests came in 1825,
when President Bolivar of the Republic of New Granada gave a franchise
for a canal at Panama to the Frenchman, Baron Thierry, who failed to raise the required capital.

First Action by the United States—
In 1835, as the result of a resolution introduced in the Senate by Henry Clay, Charles Biddle, then secretary
President Jackson to visit the isthmus
and report on the various canal routes proposed.

First Report to the United States Government—By Biddle in 1836, favoring the Panama route. He had been so struck with it that he returned to the United States without examining the Nicaraguan, Darien or Tehuantepec routes. No action followed.

First Railroad Built—From 1849 to 1855, more than half a century, a time
as has been taken to build the great canal. Fever killed so many thousands that it was said a laborer was buried under every sleeper on the Panama road.

First Actual Canal Building Began
in 1878, the Universal Interoceanic Canal Company incorporated in Paris
by Ferdinand de Lesseps, who had built the Suez Canal.

First Blast on Culebra Hill, now Culebra Cut—On January 10, 1880, by the De Lesseps Company, in the presence of a distinguished gathering.

First Failure—In 1887 the impossibility of digging a sea-level canal with

In the estimated 12 years and at the estimated cost of $200,000,000 became apparent. More than $200,000,000 had already been spent. The company went into bankruptcy.

First Work on a Lock Canal—This was taken up by the New Panama canal company in 1894, which practically ceased operations after five years work.

First Digging by Americans—May 4, 1904, taking over the rights and property of the French Canal Company,
and obtaining necessary concession
from the Republic of Panama.

First Train of Atlantic and Pacific
Waters—Blowing up of the Gamboa
Dike, when President Wilson touched
an electric button in Washington,
October 10, 1913.

First Boat of Any Kind to Make Transisthmian Passage—A nameless
mud scow of the Panama Railroad,
which passed from the Pacific entrance to Culebra out in November 1913, and was sent to the Atlantic entrance in December, 1913.

First Man to Swim Through the Canal—Was Alfred Brown, an American, who swam from Gatun Locks to Balboa, a distance of thirty miles on November 24 last in 16 hours, 35
minutes actual swimming time.

First Ocean to Pass Completely Around South America by Way of the Canal—Was the tug Reliance, Captain
R. C. Thompson, which sailed from Colon, February 11, 1912, voyaged 10-500 miles around South America and returned to New York City, February 1st
last.

Evansville News

Evansville, Aug. 13.—A force of men are at work on the fair grounds,
getting them in the best possible
condition under the direction of C. F.
Jorgenson, superintendent of grounds.

A large vessel, 60x100 ft. has been put up to accommodate the big list
of entries which has been secured
through the untiring efforts of Dr. C.
S. Ware, superintendent of speed.

Miss Ruth Chase, pleasantly entertained ten girl members of the class
of 1911 at a class breakfast yesterday.
The young ladies met at six o'clock a.
m. at the Chase home, going from there to the fair where they enjoyed a picnic, water roast, etc.

The Misses Sarah Smith, Bueh
and Marion Cole, Hazel and Wilna Bourbeau, Alice and Margaret Holden, Lucy Langenkamp, Rena Beat
and Alice Wall of Albany, returned Friday from a camping party given by Miss Lucile Miller at the Badfish
river, near Cooksville.

Speed Superintendent C. S. Ware
was in Janesville yesterday in the interest of the fair.</

OVER TEN THOUSAND AT FAIR GROUNDS ON JANESVILLE DAY

"Two years ago I warned the people of Wisconsin that even though an income tax law might be enacted, it would not result in reducing their taxes. Has my prophecy been fulfilled? Every receipt in the state is a sufficient answer to the question. And these same men who are now traveling up and down the state, again appealing for the suffrage of the electorate, are the same men who were traveling up and down the state two years ago, making their pledges to the people that if an income tax law were enacted the effect would be to substantially reduce the taxes upon the home, the farm, the factory and every other species of property that is subject to direct taxation. Instead of lower taxes, our taxes are higher than ever. When the people again hearken to the siren song of the 'progressives,' will the people again permit themselves to be duped by specious promises of impossibilities? Are the people so that they will not see the truth as the truth is written even across the etheral vault of heaven, in letters of living light?"

"There is no reason on the face of the earth why the income that the state now presently derives from its corporation taxes and revenues should not be sufficient to defray the entire expense of carrying on our state government, effectively, safely and progressively."

"Because I went to the people in my last campaign and faced the high taxes with their crimes and sought to arouse the people to a realizing sense of the wrongs from which they suffered, I was pronounced a reactionary, and now I am characterized as a Tory, and even an outlaw."

"If it is necessary in order to be a 'progressive' that I should subscribe to the doctrine of high taxes, then call me 'Tory,' if you may, for I am opposed to that doctrine."

"If it is necessary that I shall endorse the policy of subjecting all of the interests of the state to the domination of university professors and university politicians in order that I may bear the title of 'progressive,' then call me 'reactionary' if you will, for I am opposed to that policy."

"If it is necessary that I shall uphold the system of creating boards and commissions for the sole and only purpose of providing 'places' to be filled by university professors and university politicians, then call me 'outlaw' if you will, because I am opposed to that system."

"If it is necessary in order that I may give my approval to the squandering of the people's money in building a few good roads in a few isolated places at an exorbitant expense, then call me 'reactionary' if you will, because I am opposed to that policy."

"If it is necessary that I shall put me down for anything that those machine manipulators may be pleased to call me, because as long as I have voice and strength I will be heard in protest against the policy of the 'progressives' that I shall give my approval to the squandering of the people's money in building a few good roads in a few isolated places at an exorbitant expense, then call me 'reactionary' if you will, because I am opposed to that policy."

"I have followed the meandering line of the 'progressive' policy, and have seen the valleys filled with an exhaustive fertility stretching away from their banks. With pleasure, that I may not speak, I have driven through the beautiful region I have seen the hamlets and cities teeming with the life of manufacture, and I have seen the primitive schoolhouse by the roadside, and the palatial college on the hill, and the homes of affluence, and the fields of plenty, and all of it has quickened my patriotism and intensified my pride, and I have seen the people of this great and omnipotent God has anything to do with providing this bounteous, plentifulness when I reflected upon the claims and professions of my republican opponents."

"The 'progressive' has been positively proved only to cover multitude of sins and now their sins have found them out and they will be driven from stations of official trust and confidence before the lash of outraged public opinion."

Finish Judging Today.
Judging of the exhibits, started yesterday morning and continued throughout the day. Various exhibits in the premium list were not reached last evening and the marking was continued this morning.

It is expected that several days will elapse before the association adjourns. Considerable work remains to be finished following the marking by the judges and with the large number of entries this may be prolonged for possibly a day or two with the final work necessary to close the big show tonight.

Competition was extremely keen and the judges were narrowly the winners in the judging of blue, red and white ribbons strung on the divers pens passed upon, indicated first, second and third premiums respectively. In the poultry department three hundred and sixty-four birds were entered. Marking of the chickens was finished during the afternoon and that of the ducks and geese was continued today. Good fanners were well represented with their game and many birds shown at the winter poultry show were also entered here.

Grains, garden truck and other farm products were on exhibition but as a whole much interest by exhibitors seemed to have been taken in the live stock exhibits.

Floral hall was mecca for the ladies. Beautiful flowers and plants, delicate needlework of art, baby samples of the culinary department, although the reporter was not allowed to sample the goodies.

Much interest was manifested in all premium departments during the day. Followers of the farm, sheep, swine, horses and cattle viewed with interest the premier entries as the judges had them brought forth for inspection. Many other examples of household art, the manual training boys had exhibits of their work mounted and the drawings and water color paintings of the under grades drew favorable comment. High school girls of the domestic science department have their needlework on hand and the showing of shirt waists, dresses, aprons and the grade of sewing articles demonstrated the grade of self-help taught the young ladies.

No premiums will be given in the Made in Janesville department. Dealers and manufacturers of carriages, wagons, automobiles, engines, agricultural implements and other machinery were invited to make displays of their exhibits interesting, educational and attractive. No charge was made for space, but being the desire to stimulate home trade and set on foot business as possible from adjacent territory.

What the ultimate result will be, can only be conservatively estimated, but taking from the manner in which firm agents were demonstrating and pushing their wares yesterday and yesterday, only good ends can follow. Many prospective buyers were on the grounds.

PERSONAL MENTION.
Mr. and Mrs. Malcomb J. Harper and daughter, Kathryn, of Brodhead, are guests of relatives in the city. Mrs. Harriet Bennett of Green Bay is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Elser.

Miss Elsie Dahms of Monroe visited the fair here yesterday and left last evening for a visit at Madison. Miss Frances Kline of Monroe is visiting Janesville friends. Anthony Carroll, Catherine Carroll, Alice Carroll, Margaret Neville of Conklesville motored to Janesville yesterday and were the guests of Miss Alice Carroll at E. D. McGowan's residence.

TELLS OF THRILLING ADVENTURE IN WEST

Mrs. S. T. Kidder, Wife of Congregational Minister of This City, Has Daring Experience

In July, Mrs. S. T. Kidder, wife of Rev. S. T. Kidder of the First Congregational church of this city is a real heroine, is shown by the manner in which she outwitted the robber of twenty-three stage coaches at Yellowstone park, July 28th.

Mrs. Kidder, who lives with her daughter, Miss Mary, in Madison, was a member of the tourist party way. In the party was a highwayman, who escaped with over $3,000 in money and valuables. She outwitted the man, who held one hundred tourists at his gun's end. She weighed her chances of escape and decided to try to escape. She hid in a thicket for an hour, hugging her money bag and chuckling at her escape.

Both Mrs. Kidder and her daughter returned from Yellowstone Saturday to their Madison home. Mrs. Kidder says:

"Our carriage was stopped at the foot of the hill near Shoshone Point. We were told to get out and walk up the hill. I thought nothing except that we were to see some new interesting feature. When we had ascended the hill a man who looked like a soldier asked all to deliver their purses to him. Even then I did not realize our predicament. It occurred to me that he was to safeguard our property. I was about to hand over my purse when my daughter, Mary, said, 'Mother, this is a hold-up. Don't give them your purse. I hesitated and made no move to deliver my property to the man who now flashed a gun menacingly. One of the male tourists walked up to him and said, 'If I had a gun I'd deliver a dose of lead to you.' The bandit said, 'Well, you turn around and run down the hill. I ran along the roadway and hid in the woods for about an hour. I joined the party after it had proceeded, minus about $3,000. My daughter stayed through the proceedings, but she had nothing of value with her.' Mrs. Kidder laughed repeatedly in recounting the tale of the hold-up and rather disparaged her cleverness in evading the desperado, accepting her escape as a matter of course.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. Charles Gage will entertain at a card party on Friday afternoon at 2:30 at her home on Court street. James Waddle of Ravine street is home from a business trip on the road.

Mrs. Charles Qualman of Beloit spent Wednesday the guest of friends in this city. Miss Ethel Jones went to Rockford yesterday for a visit with friends.

Miss Elisabeth Kember has returned from a visit to a few days in this city the guest of friends. Chet Phillips of Lake Lawn at Delavan Lake, and a party of friends were in the city on Wednesday. They came to attend the races.

David Roberts of Waukesha spent Wednesday in Janesville. Mrs. James Lewis, who has been spending the past year with relatives in Scotland, is in the city the guest of friends. Mrs. Lewis sailed from Glasgow just before the European war was declared.

Arthur Welsh went to Koshkonong yesterday and will be back today. William Davis of Milton was a visitor at the Janesville fair on Wednesday. Louis Clark of Chicago is the guest of friends in this city. Elmer and family of Fulton visited the Janesville fair on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Halpin of Chicago have returned home after a few days spent with Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Connors of Cherry street. John Schack of Fort Atkinson is visiting friends in this city this week. Charles Brown of Fond du Lac, Wis., is in the city taking in the fair. Mr. Brown spent his boyhood days in Janesville.

Mrs. Sue McManus of Harrison street spent Wednesday with friends in Edgerton. Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Halpin of Chicago, who have been visiting friends in this city for the past week, returned home on Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. George Moran of Beloit are spending the day in the city. They came to attend the races at the Janesville fair.

CLEAR LAKE BANK HAS RESUMED BUSINESS.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

STEAL SUITS FROM ED. ARNESON SHOP

Thieves Pry Window From Sill and Get Away With Sixty Dollars Worth of Clothes.

Thieves gained entrance into the tailor shop of Edward Arneson at No. 3 South Academy street some time last night by prying out an entire window frame and stole about sixty dollars' worth of clothes. The entire window frame was removed from the casing and the window itself left on the inside of the store.

Evidently the intruders had the clothes which they wanted spotted before hand for only the best coats and pants were taken from the dry racks. The thieves were shielded in their work in entering the store by a large bill board which almost completely covered the Arneson store, where the window was opened. The list of goods stolen reported to the police was as follows: Two black coats, one vest, one pair of dark suit and pepper color pants, three pairs of blue serge pants and one black striped suit.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES WILL OBTAIN LAND

Representative Baker Introduces Bill to Grant Land for Sanitarium Purpose.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Aug. 13.—All regularly organized and incorporated fraternal organizations would be allowed to obtain tracts of government land for sanitarium purposes for the benefit of their members, under a bill introduced by Representative Baker of California, now before the house upon recommendation of the public lands committee. It follows a movement for legislation of this kind that has been carried on by fraternal associations and societies for a number of years. Many bills, previously have been introduced on the subject, but they were to grant lands to these organizations by name while the pending measure is general in scope, permitting any fraternal organization to investigate and determine the condition of the climate, soil, water supply facilities and other questions, before obtaining patent. Then the organization could set out and according four sections of uncultivated mountain, arid, semi-arid or mountainous land, by placing substantial improvements, the land to be used exclusively for sanitarium purposes and if not so used to revert to the United States.

The public lands committee has just reported to the house that there are large tracts of land in the public land states which are practically useless for individual holdings. The committee's secretary of the interior to withdraw or reserve the land applied for, for not exceeding two years, to enable any fraternal organization to investigate and determine the condition of the climate, soil, water supply facilities and other questions, before obtaining patent. Then the organization could set out and according four sections of uncultivated mountain, arid, semi-arid or mountainous land, by placing substantial improvements, the land to be used exclusively for sanitarium purposes and if not so used to revert to the United States.

They are in the lead, EL MARKO and RELIANCE Cigars. Adv.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

A POETIC PUNISHMENT.

WE had been driving through one of the most miserable sections of the city when I saw a sign that read: "The Evening Chit-Chat." It was not a city sign. There is something cheerful about a city sign. I think, in spite of the dirt and the squalor, women sit on the doorsteps calling to and fro to each other; children laugh and play in the streets; the men folk take solid comfort in pipes and shirtheaves; there is an air of friendliness and irresponsible abandon that leavens the sordidness of the city's poverty spots.

But the section through which we were passing was a suburban slum—a miserable, lifeless group of run down houses with all the loneliness and aloofness of respectability, and all the squalor of abject poverty.

We had been laughing at some trivial matter when we entered that section of the city but the laughter died away and the shadow of that sordidness fell upon us.

"It makes me absolutely unhappy to think of people's having to live all their lives in a place like this," cried Molly, the little stenographer lady, with a shudder.

"It's terrible, isn't it?" said the Author Man's wife. "But I don't believe we'll ever be so poor as this. There's enough in the bonds, isn't there?" she appealed to her husband, "to keep us from this even if everything else should go?"

The Author Man, with a slightly curled lip, admitted that he thought there was, and his wife relaxed. "Well, I should hope so," she said, and became entirely cheerful again.

The misery and sordidness had now lost all power to sadden her. She was miserably sure it couldn't come into her life and that was all that mattered.

I think there are a great many people like the Author Man's wife who are so sensitive that they are deeply moved at the sight of misery—because it makes them fear that such things might come to them or theirs. But take away that fear and their serenity is entirely restored.

The mere thought of suffering for themselves saddens them far more than the actual sight of other people's sufferings.

There are even people in whom the sight of other people's sufferings seems to induce a sort of thanksgiving. "How fortunate I am," is their first and most poignant thought.

Of course it is one of the laws of nature that man in his natural state should think first of himself, but have we not raised ourselves an inch or two above this primitiveness?

And even if we do think first of ourselves, that does not mean that all our thoughts need be selfish. Suppose we never saw or came to you or yours, does that make a matter of indifference to you that there are thousands who are suffering?

Shame on you if it does! Sometimes I wonder if the punishment of those who make their wealth out of other men's deprivations and miseries, or if those who are part of the unchangeable scheme of things, will not be to suffer in their next incarnation all the misery they neglected in this.

I am tempted to hope so.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I was 32 years old this spring, although I do not look that old. I am fairly good looking and wear good clothes. My folks are quite well. I have one of my sisters and brothers, younger than I am, are married.

(1) How could I attract the attention of a young man about my own age? I hardly ever see him. I go to a country church, where there are no young men at all.

(2) How could I get a job in a store? I have never clerked, but would like the job. I am handy at most anything.

(3) Am I an old maid? I would like to get married, but the right man has not come along yet.

(4) Would you advise me to answer an ad in the "personal" column? Some say it is wrong. I am afraid to do it.

(5) I have a full face. How should I wear my hair? I have a full face.

(6) Give an afternoon tea or informal supper once a week or so and invite your men and women friends to come. Make it so very pleasant and the "rents" so good that they will look forward to coming. In this way you can invite the young man and get him into the habit of coming. Find out what interests him and be able to talk about it, or lead him to talk about it. Be pleasant, attentive and as attractive looking as possible.

I do not see why you should not be able to marry a nice man. A woman of 32 is more desirable as a wife, usually, than a young girl.

(7) Apply to the proprietor or manager, tell him what you can do and ask for a trial.

(8) No woman is an old maid unless she feels that way in her heart. I think you are wise to wait for the right sort of a man than to marry any man just because he happens around.

(9) I have never had a happy marriage. I am looking for a wife who has property, and the woman want some man to be their meat ticket. That's about all there is to many of them also are fakes. Better keep safe.

(10) If you can wear your hair parted, wave it back softly over the ears, and do it in a low knot at the back of the head, you can stand a part, make the front hair into a low, loose pompadour, framing the face and covering temples and ears.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Having had bad luck on my last wash day, I came to you for some advice. Accidentally I got a dark blue stock into my good white clothes soaking them overnight with naphtha soap and stained a fancy towel and good white top shirt. I immediately rinsed them in clear cold water and soaked it in sweet milk and left them in it until the milk turned sour, but it did not come out, so I hung them up and haven't done a thing since. Could you give me some other information?

A CONSTANT READER. Javelle water will solve your problem. It will take stains out of any white goods (except wools). If your druggist hasn't put up, make it yourself as follows:

1 lb. washing soda.
1 qt. boiling water.
1 lb. chloride of lime.
3 qts. cold water.

Put soda in agate pan and pour over the boiling water.

Dissolve lime in the cold water, let settle and pour off the clear liquid into the dissolved soda. Bottle and keep in a dark place.

This is very strong and will eat into the fabric if you make the solution too strong, so start with only a little and pour the rest on as you think necessary. Rinse the articles well afterward in hot water and in the last rinsing add a little ammonia to take away the odor of the lime.

Hot oven until well browned. This will make six large muffins.

Egg With Corn—For this you may use either the fresh corn, boiling it and cutting it from the cob, or the canned corn, turning it from the tin into a bowl and draining it well before it is used. Separate the whites and yolks of five eggs and beat the latter a few minutes, the whites until stiff. Put the corn with the yolks, season to taste with pepper and salt, then stir in the whites lightly and cook in a shallow saucepan for five minutes, or until the mixture thickens. If you prefer you can cook in an omelet pan and serve with or without frying.

Fried Squash—Cut firm summer squash into slices one inch thick, remove seeds and boil five minutes. Dip the slices in a good fritter batter and fry in deep fat.

Squash Cakes—Mix two cups of cooked and mashed squash with three well-beaten eggs, one tablespoon melted butter and two tablespoons milk. Season with salt and add flour enough to make a dough. Bake in a shallow saucepan for five minutes, or until the mixture thickens. If you prefer you can cook in an omelet pan and serve with or without frying.

Stuffed Squash—Parboil a squash, remove the stem end like a cover and take out the seeds. Then scoop out part of the pulp and mix with a rich stuffing of chopped ham and veal and bread crumbs seasoned with salt and pepper and moistened with milk. Hot stuffing, then fill squash shell, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake.

Squash au Gratin—Boil and mash a summer squash, season with salt, pepper and butter, add two eggs and one-half cup of milk. Mix well and add a little cream. Bake in a shallow dish. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake.

Roast Squash—Cut summer squash into long strips and cook in the pan with a little salt, basting frequently with the drippings.

BUSY-DAY DISHES.

All sorts of casserole dishes are fine for the busy housewife who wants to serve

wholesome, attractive food to

her family when

she is too busy to give much time

to its preparation.

Most delicious dinners of a small

portion of meat

which has been

browned to add flavor, added to a few

combinations of vegetables which go

nicely together makes a main dish,

and vegetables all served hot from one dish. A very appetizing combination with a bit of mutton is a few

carrots, peas and small onions with potatoes cut the same size if there are no

small ones to be used.

Peach and Sage Pudding.—Soak a quarter of a pound of sage overnight,

if the old-fashioned kind is to be used,

in cold water to cover. Put a quart of peeled peaches, or less if the family

is small, in a buttered pudding dish,

pour over the sage, add sugar to taste

and a cupful of water; bake an hour

in a moderate oven. Serve hot or cold with cream.

When a hurried, full day is taking one's time it is a good plan to have all the food for the meal in one oven

if possible, or in the fireless cooker,

which is the joy of the busy housewife. So many foods can be better

USE GOOD ENGLISH

Use Good English, And People Will be

Glad to Listen to You.

This is Lesson XV in a series of short, simple lessons in English, by

C. R. Rounds, Inspector of English,

Wisconsin State Normal Schools.

LISTEN

How many who are now reading

this, always say "Listen!" before they make any statement to their friends?

This expression, which had a very worthy object at the start, has degenerated

until, in most instances, it means absolutely nothing. When it first came into use, about twelve years ago, it

gave a touch of intimacy and interest

to one's conversation, and was, on the whole, rather attractive; but now it is used by many people so commonly

that it no longer arouses the slightest curiosity. It adds no emphasis whatever.

Suppose you were to fine yourself

for every useless "Listen!" that you utter; would it not be a good thing?

There are many such expressions.

They once had a good, clear, useful

object; but through being used too much, they stimulate no interest whatever. The worst of it is, when careful users of English desire to use these words where they belong, scarcely anyone gets their real force. It is as though people got the habit of yelling

"Fir!" several times a day without meaning it at all. If that should happen, we should all soon get so that we would pay no attention even though an alarm for a real fire might be sounded.

Next week we shall note some of these words that we use so extravagantly. In the meantime, suppose you study your own speech and see how many silly, useless, harmful exaggera-

tions have crept into your speech and become fixed habits with you. Then suppose you start in at once to set a watch upon your tongue, to make it

say just what you mean, no more and no less, for one day. You will be frightened, maybe, to see how difficult

it is to hold yourself to a clean, clear,

chaste, honest statement of exactly

what you mean.

Peggy & Company

This Athletic Business Can Easily be Overdone.

It would appear that young Mr. Todd, Peggy's new and athletic acquaintance, is bent upon converting her to the vigorous life of the great outdoors. While he hasn't said anything of the sort as yet he apparently thinks that Peggy requires more exercise. It seems to be his determination to see that she gets it.

For that matter Peggy herself has often thought that she'd like to be athletic. At one time and not so very long ago she had aspired to be a girl tennis champ till a blister on her heel came along and spoiled it all. And then later she planned to go in for long distance swimming and she might have done quite well with that had she been able to learn to swim a bit. It has always seemed with Peggy that whenever she finds a new interest something interferes to ruin her plans.

She has achieved a real liking for Mr. Todd, however, and she feels that under his able tutelage she should be able to make real progress. For a neophyte she did very well indeed at golf yesterday. Mr. Todd was encouraging and said that with constant practice she would be able to play as well as any other girl he knew. Peggy had found that she felt rather worn out after walking so much. She complained that she had never been a very good walker and she—but Mr. Todd knew just the thing for that. Walking is like anything else, he said, and required practice.

That's why it is that we find Peggy quite a way from home today and in an attitude of extreme languor. At Mr. Todd's suggestion they had sailed a cross country jaunt that Peggy might practice walking. And after some seven miles or so over hills of varying activities Peggy is completely tuckered out. She admits that if life depended on it she couldn't take another step. Mr. Todd begins to feel that he thinks that they've gone a little too far.

Friends passing in an auto at this moment pick them up and Peggy considers that they are very fortunate. She's sure she doesn't know what they would have done had she been forced to walk. Mr. Todd doesn't regard it in quite so despairing a way. "Shucks, I could easily have carried you home," says the vigorous and muscular Mr. Todd.

What Does This Mean?

Make Walls and Ceilings of BESTWALL Instead of Plaster

The owner likes Bestwall better because it protects his house from fire—keeps out cold, heat and dampness—is quickly applied—takes any kind of decoration without panels—eliminates muss and damage of plaster and possibility of its cracking, breaking, etc.—and finally, Bestwall wears as long as the house.

The contractor and carpenter prefer Bestwall because it is easier, quicker and cheaper to apply than lath and plaster. Carpenters lose no time waiting for plasterers to finish inside—job is finished when expected—no expense for a man to clean up after plasterers.

The real estate man insists on Bestwall because it improves the interior appearance of the house, minimizes repair expense, makes houses easier to sell or rent and keep rented.

The architect specifies Bestwall, too, because it enables him to carry out his wishes and give his clients better service.

These dealers recommend Bestwall because they want to give customers greater value for their money. Ask any of them or the manufacturers for literature, sample and prices.

"Bob, thief is a nasty world, and it's used altogether too carelessly these days. Now, I'm not here to teach any moral lessons or anything like that, but are you doing any harm in accepting this? No, you're doing what any successful business man would do. You're taking a chance of making forty thousand dollars. And why? Because you're cheating the people? No. Because the dam will fall down? Certainly not. The dam will last a hundred years. Now, a lot of public improvements are put up to last one hundred years, and you know their history. They're generally torn down in twenty. And this particular dam is not half big enough for the requirements. The chances are it will be rebuilt in less than twenty-five years. It's a case of penny wise and pound foolish so far as the appropriation goes, and you know it."

"But I tell you it's graft."

"No, it's taking advantage of the foolish and incompetent specifications made for this job. Why, it's not even sharp practice. It's making money on another man's mistake. It's picking up the loose ends of a business deal and putting them in your pocket, and believe me, it's the loose ends that have made the American millionaire."

"Is that the secret?"

"Certainly. Why, it's the same opportunity that would come to you if you were walking across a farm, kicked up some dirt and discovered gold. Would you go to the owner of the farm and say: 'There's gold on your land; I hope it makes you rich?' Certainly not. You'd buy the farm. You might stake him to the potatoes, but you'd take the gold. What the devil is the matter with you fellows who are always working your hearts and souls out for twenty-five dollars a week because of your Sunday school notions? Here's an opportunity right in your hand. Don't let it go by. Take advantage of it."

"Not me, Brand."

"All right. We can get along without our end of that particular profit, even if it is a useless waste. Waste, I tell you, and nothing else. But Bob, you can't get along without the forty thousand, and let me tell you something; labor doesn't make money; toll doesn't make money—for the tollier. The only thing that makes money is money, and if you haven't some of it to turn over and make into some more, you're going to work for somebody else all your life. That's the tollier's job. Now, be sensible. Take this and stop worrying."

"John, I'm afraid you have got into the wrong house. It's true I haven't got anything but twenty-five dollars a week—that I haven't paid for this home, which you say you partly own, and for which you so kindly overcharged me. It's true that I've got a wife to take care of and can't even buy her the pretty things she wants. But supposing I take your money. What is the price I pay for it? My conscience. I'd have money in the bank, but fear and dread of God in my heart."

"Fear, fiddlesticks! It's not fear in your heart, but chill in your feet, that's worrying you. What you need, Bob, is nerve, and—money. Good old American eagles are the greatest nerve builders in the world."

"I know it, but I want to get mine in the daylight like a white man; not in the dark like a footpad."

"Well, you're mighty particular about yourself, but supposing you think of some one else. How about your wife? Don't you think you might do something for her? If you were taking one nickel from the people, or stealing a cent, I wouldn't argue with you, but you're not. You're simply taking advantage of another man's blunder. You can't stop that blunder; you can't go to that man and have these specifications changed. But you can take this money and put your wife in a better position. If you don't do it, it's your own fault. Bob, if you stick to these specifications you're throwing that two hundred thousand dollars and your share of it away, just as if you dropped it in the river. I'm showing you how you can save forty thousand dollars. But, no, you won't do it. Instead of that you talk about grafting and stealing and conscience, and all of the gibberish you find in the yellow papers. Now, I'm telling you straight; you're throwing away an opportunity that may never come to you again. You're stepping right over the gold on the farm and you're handing it to somebody else. Oh, I'm so sorry."

The sudden entrance of his wife prevented a reply by Reynolds. Both men rose to their feet. Bob, in the height of his moral combat with Brand, had almost forgotten her proximity. He had not noticed that the door to their room was slightly ajar. Brand had, and in his peroration, as it were, when he saw that Reynolds showed no sign of accepting his offer, he had purposely raised his voice so that she could hear. Jane extended her hand now as her husband presented the millionaire, and she smiled a welcome.

"I couldn't help but hear," she said, "and I thought I had better let you know. Am I in the way?"

"Not at all," Brand promptly answered. "You see, Mrs. Reynolds, Bob and I are old friends, and I would like to be counted among his wife's friends also."

"Thank you. I can believe that," she turned a more serious face to her husband. "Bob," she asked quietly, "don't you think you had better consider what Mr. Brand said?"

"Now, Jane, please!" he exclaimed. "I'm glad to have your advice in all things, but I cannot have you interfere in this. Please don't."

Jane made no response. Her husband's answer permitted none. It cut like a knife and brought the blood rushing to her cheeks; blood that seemed to forsake the heart, leaving it chilled, and heat the brain with rebellious and alien thoughts.

"I cannot have you interfere," it was the first time he had ever used such terms. They sounded like the clarion notes of a trumpet. The walls received them and hurled them back to her; walls that recalled her long hours of loneliness; hard walls, cold walls, cheap walls; walls that she had fought with; bare walls, that after days of toil she had embellished with inexpensive prints and such knick-knacks as a woman's taste can summon; walls that reflected their poverty and her struggle against it.

"I cannot have you interfere," the words burned and rankled. They scorched her flushed cheeks and pounded her temples. They pierced her brain; they ran thumping and bumping down her spine and left it stiff and cold.

She drew herself up to her full height and stood regarding the two men in silence. Unconsciously they realized that she was very beautiful, like some aristocratic animal at bay, startled, but not frightened. Her eyes traveled from one to the other; to the immaculate Brand, in his proper evening clothes, stamped with the indelible mark of success, to the shoddy, but virtuous Reynolds, flouting the face of failure. Despite the simple severity of her own dress, a blouse affair of blue serge, much worn, but endowed with such charm as an ingenious woman can impart, she looked more the mate of the millionaire than of the humbler man.

"Bob and I Are Old Friends and I Would Like to Be Counted Among His Wife's Friends Also."

Brand, with his quick grasp of human nature and human passions, read the meaning of those glances. He read the mind in which now flashed the vision of her incongruous life; the life of a queenly woman lived in the environment of the bourgeois; he read scorn for the exacting demands of that life; inherent aversion to its petty economies and sacrifices; and he read, too, behind the firm lines of a pretty mouth, the stability and strength of character that had enabled her to combat these conditions. Here was a woman, he realized, who was a fitting companion and an efficient colleague for a man like himself; a woman who would walk hand in hand with Ambition, meet the test and revel in the reward. She loved her husband, and love, the great leveler of all caste, spanning all chasms, filling in the little voids in each hiatus, had held her down to Reynolds' level and made her what she was—a true and loyal and a sympathetic wife. Not that Reynolds was so plebeian; he was of good stock; well educated, industrious, honest and lovable. Mentally, he was of true steel, big and solid; ready to withstand the world's rebuffs. But the keen intellect of his wife was of a finer mold; steel, too, but tempered, not only to repel, but to strike back and cut through.

There came to Brand, now, as there had come to Jane the full force of Reynolds' gaucherie—"I cannot have you interfere"—truculent, calamitous phrase that stung and wounded and broke down the sympathetic bonds of forbearance. He saw them strike and saw her harden to repel them. The man of the world smiled; smiled within himself, but not for them; smiled at poor Reynolds, for whose welfare he was so solicitous; smiled at his own success and stepped toward his coat and hat. His work, the system's work, was done.

CHAPTER VII.

A Conspiracy and a Discovery.

In a luxurious suite on the seventeenth floor of one of lower Manhattan's office buildings, the president of the Hudson Cement company sat at his mahogany desk. He glanced hurriedly through a collection of letters that his secretary had selected from a larger mass as worthy of his chief's individual attention. He came at length to one addressed in a feminine hand. It was marked personal and the seal was unbroken. He opened it and read:

My Dear Mr. Brand:

Your kind note received and I assure you that its contents are fully appreciated. I quite agree with you that Mr. Reynolds does not realize the magnanimity of your offer or the opportunity it affords. Bob is an able worker and a good husband, but he is also a dreamer. I believe, and I want you to know I believe, that your attempt to help him is disinterested. I know that forty thousand dollars or two hundred thousand does not mean much to a man of your position and financial standing, and that you are going out of your way to lift a friend out of a narrow, hopeless channel of mere existence. We can, as you say, enter into a little conspiracy to aid him; to bring him to his senses in spite of himself and his deluded ideas. With that end in view I can willingly be a party to it, and I shall be most glad to see you any afternoon and peruse the plot.

Sincerely yours,
JANE REYNOLDS.

This letter was in response to one Brand had written expressing his regret at Reynolds' "foolish attitude," and suggesting that they "conspire" to make him reconsider his decision. The reply had come without delay, and he saw that he was to have a willing ally. He pressed a button at his left and a young man entered from an adjoining room.

"Just a minute, Radcliffe," said the millionaire as he dashed off a few words on a telegraph blank. "Have this sent at once and if there is any business this afternoon that requires immediate attention refer it to Mr. Burns. I will not return after luncheon. Telephone for the car."

He put on his automobile coat and cap and went out. After he had dined—luncheon meant a substantial repast for Brand—he headed for Staten Island and arrived at the Reynolds' cottage a few minutes after the telegram had been delivered. Mrs. Reynolds answered his knock. She was dressed in the best that her meager wardrobe would afford for the occasion. A mackintosh served as a motor coat and she wore a modest tam-o'-shanter, or skating cap. Mrs. Collins had been impressed into service as a chaperon. When summoned by Jane to enact the role she had become duly excited over the prospect of riding in an automobile with its millionaire owner. Quite knowingly she had winked the other eye when told that the trip was for purely business reasons and that there was no occasion to dress up. She had hurried home and made a more elaborate toilet than her neighbor. She donned her best coat and a large hat, then hastily essayed a rejuvenation through the magic of cosmetics with the result that the attempt was quite obvious even if the accomplishment fell short.

Jane greeted Brand most cordially. "Your telegram came only a half hour ago," she told him. "I had no idea you would be so prompt in getting to work. But I guess we are ready. Mrs. Collins will accompany us."

Brand directed a grudging nod toward Mrs. Collins.

Dinner Stories

A New Yorker was spending a night at a "hotel" in a Southern town, and, when going to his room for the night, he told the colored porter that he wanted to be called early in the morning. The porter replied:

"Say, boss, I reckon yo' ain't familiar with these heah modern inventions. When yo' wants to be called in de mawnin' all yo' has to do is jest press de button at de head of yo' bed. Den we comes up and calls yo'."

The magistrate had asked all of the customary questions, about taking "this man" or "this woman" for a lawful, wedded companion, and about "promising to love, honor and obey." The ceremony was finished. The couple were married. The bridegroom, a western Kentuckian, started to reach for his wallet. Then he stopped. "Squire," he said, "I got a proposition to make to you. I'll give you $2 now or I'll wait six months and give you what I think my wife's worth then, even if it's $200." The magistrate looked at the bride for a moment. "I believe I'll take the $2 now," he said. . . .

At an eastern military academy the night guard heard a noise. "Halt! Who goes there?" he called, in accordance with army regulations. It was another student bent on midnight frolic, and he answered, "Moses." This frivolous and utter disregard of military rule brought back the command, the guard probably suspecting the other's identity. "Advance, Moses, and give the Tea Commandments."

THE STEEL WORKER TELLS IT TO THE GOOD JUDGE

GET the taste of the richest tobacco grown. "Right-Cut" is the Real Tobacco Chew that you hear men boosting to their friends. Sappy, full-bodied tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough. You'll be glad, too, that you've found "Right-Cut"—and to pass the word along to men that you know.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to get tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, on fine and short shreds so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

If your dealer does not sell it, send us 10c. in stamps for a pouch of "Right-Cut" Chewing Tobacco.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, August 13, 1874.—Buckwheat is said to be escaping the ravages of the insect pest, to a very large extent, in this locality.

Tobacco does not look well. We have heard of a quantity of tobacco, damaged by hail, being sold at Porter for 4 cents recently.

New wheat has been sold today at 90c, 95c and $1.00; barley, 80c, 90c and $1.00; corn, 60c; oats, 40c; and new rye, very choice, at 65c. Yields of wheat are variously reported at 7,012, and 14 bushels per acre, actual experience. Wild rye is quoted at from $6 to $10 per ton.

Last evening the state geologist arrived in the city. This morning a visit to the well served to acquaint Mr. A. Chicago, geologist, has established himself in front of W. L. Good's jewelry store with peaches. Janesville is attracting capitalists from all quarters, just now.

The new truss for Court street bridge has been placed in position and when completed the structure promises to be stronger than ever.

American Huts in France.
Marquis de Castellano, in his Paris letter to the New York American, says: "Once upon a time everything in France came from England; not only our clothes, but also our soiled linen, which was sent across the channel to be washed and then returned to Paris with an immaculate whiteness. In other words, Paris was in the hands of the English and they decided what clothes should be worn and imposed that decision upon Europe. In due course came the silk hat and, willy-nilly, Parisians were obliged to adopt this awful form of headgear. America, by inventing more practical head coverings, has, to a certain extent, liberated the world from these hideous 'stovepipes,' which England was pleased to impose upon us, and we are profoundly grateful to the United States for this blessing."

She Had Heard Him.
Father—Daughter, I'll tell you a young fellow I wish you would grow to like—young Wrigley—he'll make a noise in the world just when you least look for it." Mabel—"You've got him sized up all right, dad; I heard him eating soup in a restaurant the other day."

...takes the average boy or girl two years to settle down after making a hit in an amateur show. Finky Kerr says you don't have to be an epicure to know that an occasional roast is better than a daily stew.

BRITISH TROOPS BY THOUSANDS POUR INTO WAR-TORN BELGIUM

Top, English navy service corps embarking with gun and horses at South Sea, England; British marines landing on North Sea coast.

English troops by thousands are pouring into France and Belgium, where they will be thrown against the invading hordes of Germans. The photos show troops embarking at South Sea, England, and the landing of British marines on the North Sea coast.

THESE TOWNS IN BELGIUM ARE GETTING INTO THE WAR NEWS

These quiet Belgium cities have suddenly become of world interest, and figure in the daily dispatches from the seat of war. The upper photo is a view of one of the main streets of Ghent. In the tower at the extreme left is the bell which for centuries has called the Belgians to war. The lower photo shows the fortress and town of Dinant. This powerful fort may at any time be called upon to check the advance of the Germans.
The Belgians are a highly organized and efficient people, devoted to their native land and understanding how to use its resources to the utmost. They have shown the world that such qualities in peace are a good guarantee of fine courage and tenacity in war, even where there had been no call to battle for eighty years and none of the officers had ever led troops against a civilized foe.

GERMANS WANT SVEABORG, THE "GIBRALTAR OF THE BALTIC"

A view of Sveaborg.

The plans of the German war office are said to include the capture of Sveaborg, the "Gibraltar of the Baltic." Sveaborg is a port in Finland, commanding the entrance to the bay of Helsinki.

CANDY FRAUD PREVENTED

No Sweetmeat Substitution Where This Safety Box Is Made Use Of.
Mr. Tightwad, who has undertaken to deceive his best girl by buying a pound of 15-cent candy which he proceeded to put in the box of a high-grade confectioner, is about to be circumvented in his career of deception by the product of an ingenious inventor, consisting of a safety feature attached to the candy box, which will prevent any such deception. One might think that it would be a difficult operation to deceive a girl by an imposition of this character, but alas! although she has been told of the folly of doing so, many a girl sizes up the youth that comes to see her by the clothes he wears and she accepts the box of candy which he brings at its face value. It may be a miserable article from a cheap sweetmeat shop, but if he is cunning enough to put it in the box of some well-known candy man, she foolishly thinks it is the real stuff. Confectioners say that this mean imposition is practiced often than is imagined, but in order to prevent the contemptible trick a non-refillable candy box has been invented by a Philadelphia genius. The thing is accomplished by placing a pair of locking devices on the two parts of the box so that after the box is filled and the lid placed thereon it is secured there and in order to get at the contents it is necessary to use some little force. In doing this the box is marred a little, not enough to impair its usefulness but enough to proclaim that the box has been used and cannot well be made to do a second term of duty.
